

that he threw up his knee to save his body, and managed to roll out of bed and get hold of an unloaded revolver, which frightened Walker, who then ran into his wife's bedroom, and while he (the prisoner) was stabling his wife, Young shouted out: "Oh, yes, wretch!" Then Walker returned and stabbed him again in the back while he lay on the floor. Mr. Taylor (prisoner's wife's brother) said, I heard Walker say a short time ago that he would have the lives of his wife and child for a trial for the awful murder of George Young, and also for a felonious assault on his wife Maria Walker. The prisoner during the hearing (which occupied about an hour) did not seem to be moved in the slightest degree. He declined to answer any questions, and did not appear to watch the proceedings "at all closely."

the charts of the ocean by a dot, the survivors of some wrecked vessel's crew, were here, survivors of some

There is, if we remember right, a "shipwreck" in the title of Lloyds list headed "a curious circumstance," and seldom indeed does it happen that vessels come placed on that list as ever heard of again. Yet it does not follow that all the hulls they carried are lying beneath the waves. It is by no means improbable that many have found their way to some island, where they may still be living in dreary solitude. The lines do not fall to them in such pleasant places as they fell to the Rose. The land they have reached may be a mere rock, destitute of vegetation, and saved by wild birds. They may have but exchanged a death by drowning for a death by starvation, aggravated by despair. One may imagine now, when the suffering has been so long, how it affects the mind, the weary eye will fancy that welcome sail appears in the offing and the shipwrecked man endeavors in vain to gather sufficient strength to make a signal to the long-looked-for assistance. To those, doubtless, existence has been a hell, and they have lived in a half-wild state for the ordinary term of human life, and then have died within the rude shelter built by their own hands. Some shall we say a very few have been saved, by the providential visit of vessels, and returned to the

A shocking story is that told by Captain Dalgarno, of the ship Invincible. On the 2nd May, 1864, the vessel left M. Bourne's wharf, Calcutta, and on the night of the 10th May, during a storm, she struck on the N.W. end of the Island of Auckland, in latitude 53° S., longitude 106° E., and in half-an-hour became a total wreck. She was driven in between two very high cliffs, and the lower rocks all round, so that had the ship struck 200 yards on either side of the spot, not a life would have been saved. The sea was running fearfully high at the time, and the surf was such as to baffle the strongest swimmer. Out of a crew of twenty-five, including the captain, six were drowned at once, and the remaining nineteen were driven on shore. They huddled themselves together among the holes of the rocks to try and preserve some warmth. The night was bitterly cold and intensely dark, the spray dashed continually over them. At length day broke, and the sufferers looked around to ascertain their position. The wreck had broken up, and the only things washed to them from it were 2 lbs. of biscuit and 2 lbs. of pork, and these were all the provisions for nineteen men. They collected some boxes which floated in and made a rough kind of hut, and the carpenter, who had fortunately saved a box of Iceber matches, lighted a fire. There they remained four days, till having eaten all the food, and seeing no prospect of obtaining more from the wreck, they resolved to climb up the cliffs and so reach the top of the island. But this was no easy undertaking, as the cliffs were between 2000 and 3000 feet high, and almost perpendicular. One man died in the attempt, and the others were quite exhausted when they reached the summit of the island. They found no inhabitants: no prospect of food; and the snow was lying on the ground. At night they made a covering of some boughs and laid upon it. They found fresh water; and some roots of plants, which they eat. Next day a wild pig was caught, but it was only a small one, and there were eighteen half-perished men to feed, so that it did not go far. They then travelled across the island towards a bay that they perceived on the East side, but another man sank on the journey and died. The travelling was exceedingly difficult, as their path lay through heavy scrub, and they had no boots or protection for the feet. They made a sort of shelter for themselves out of palm for the spot for twenty-one days on route. The mate tells the wretched tale that followed, thus:—"Seven of our company went back to the wreck, but they never came back, and we never saw anything more of them. The other six and I made for the beach with great difficulty, through the thick bush, and we were rejoiced to find plenty of shellfish. We sent one of our party back for the remainder, sending a few of the shellfish with him, and he found two more had died the day after we had left. The other three along with him. We here made a sort of shelter for ourselves, and began to look about the rocks for what we could get to eat. We stopped here for six or seven days. A party of five of us made for the next bay, where we found traces of human beings, and the place they had been living in. Here we found very comfortable. There were also plenty of shell-fish in this bay. One of our party went to know we had parted from. We were now all getting very weak. We had caught a seal and a few rats of great service to us. We began to make a sort of raft, to carry two or three of us; and about twenty days after, we got another seal, but between these times several of our party died of starvation. Other two men and I commenced to go in a boat towards the point of the island, and there we found another seal and plenty of fish. Three of us lived for three weeks on this point of the island, when we left, to induce the others to join us, but never returned; and some time after, the same island was seen, and we three were the sole survivors of the nation. I was frequently so faint with hunger that I scarcely able to walk. The seal meat was the only meat that did us good. Sometimes they were plentiful, and sometimes it was scarce or four weeks between our times of catching them. We dried their skins, and made shoes and leggings of them. We also made a small boat out of the seal skins. It carried two of us, and we used to go to the other islands to seek for seals. There are two or three islands close together, with plenty of seals upon them; but it was only on five days that we could go in the small boat. We now, however, built three of our own, that carried all three of us, and in it we moved to another island, where there were quantities of rabbits, but could only get such of them as had been killed by the hawk. We got some of the seal well here, having plenty to eat; and we built houses, and endeavoured to make ourselves as comfortable as possible. In many parts of the islands there were human traces, and the appearance of a small quantity of work having been done, and this encouraged us to look anxiously for the coming of some whaler or sealer—but no. At length their sufferings came to an end. After they had been some time on the islands, and ten days, the Porcupin ship, Julia, bound from Macao to Callao, with Chinese emigrants, having sprung a leak, sent a boat off to the island to see if help could be procured. The boat was manned by the three survivors—Captain Dalgarino, Mr. Andrew Smith (chief mate), and Robert Holding (seaman). They were brought on board, where every kindness was shown to them, and on the 20th June they reached Callao in safety.

Such is a sad and true tale of real life, and we should think it had enough of suffering and danger about it to satisfy the most ardent lover of adventure.

LARGE VEGETABLES—An impression prevails among our Sydney friends that the soil of Rockhampton is like the shores of the "old New England," from the fact that the "New England" soil, is only one of the many fallacies which we are constantly dis-proving, though to those who are so far from the river as to be ignorant of the fact, it is notorious that the north side of the river abounds in the very richest soil to be found anywhere—the accumulation of vast deposits made by periodical floods, and that you have only to till the ground, as Douglas Fenelon would say, with a hoe to make it laugh a harvest. We were yesterday sowing a vegetable product, yelps, a turnip, a very Titan of vegetables weighing 10 lbs. and measuring 27 inches in circumference. Turnips of 14 lb. weight, and carrots of 16 and 12 are no novelty here, whatever they may be to our Sydney friends.—Northwestern, Oct. 20th.

MYSTICISMS.—M. de la Harpe, M. Blanc de Bury, in his "Memoir of the Good Confessor," "was a strong woman, an antique Jewess of superb stature. No more, but a genuine creature of the East, which, from her cradle, looked at him from the eyes of his mother!"... They say that during the last rehearsal of "Robert, Meynchov's" recited from a letter with this address:—To be opened after the first representation of "Raburi." So soon as he got home on the evening of that triumph, the son heathed the envelope, and read the biblical benediction in the simple majesty of archaic: "The Lord bless and keep thee," &c. This letter Meynchov thereupon carried about with him as a talisman.

Sale of Furniture, and the residue of the Stock-in-trade.

T. W. BOWDEN is instructed to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, 154, Pitt-street, on THURSDAY, the 16th November, at 11 o'clock,
A quantity of household furniture, personal effects, stock-in-trade, &c., removed from the Exchange Hotel to the Auction Rooms, in Pitt-street, for convenience of sale comprising, Wardrobes, chests of drawers, tables, washhand stands, chairs, trunks and bedding, looking-glasses, pictures, mantures, glassware, and the residue of a stock-in-trade.
Cash at sale.
TARFELIAN HOUSE, POTTS' POINT, DARLING HURST.
A First class Family Residence in an elevated position overlooking Woolloomooloo Bay, the Domain, a large portion of the City, the Harbour, and many of the hand-some villas in this highly respectable neighbourhood.

T. W. BOWDEN has been favoured with instructions to sell by auction, at the Lancaster Sale Rooms, 164, Pitt-street, on THURSDAY, 28th November instant, at 11 o'clock.

He has the pleasure to announce that he has been directed from the design and under the inspection of Mr. J. F. Hilly, architect. The building is of substantial masonry, the internal divisions being well adapted for the purpose of a TRAPPAEIAN HOUSE of 18 rooms, 18 inches of wall being used in the house in every part proof against the most tempestuous weather. The exterior walls are recommended upon the walls of the house. The appearance of the house is by Granitic stone which separates the property from the mansion of Mr. Danger, known as GHANTHAM HOUSE.

THE HOUSE is 5 stories high, the ground floor is spacious and well lighted. On the right of the hall is the dining-room, 24 feet by 16, furnished with marble mantelpieces, and suitable register-grates. On the left side of the hall is a large room, which is intended as a morning room, having large sliding doors which open into the drawing-room, 24 feet 6 inches by 16 feet 6 inches. The drawing-room is furnished with a large fireplace, the windows are finished in the same way, and in good taste, with high ceilings, marble mantelpieces, and register grates.

The views from these rooms are directly to the Domain.

On the north side of the house, approached from the hall, and also from the drawing-room, is the library, a room 20 feet long, 12 feet wide, and covered with the beautiful stone verandah on this side, and leading to the beautiful flower garden with water fountain in the centre.

A large portion of the harbour, the shipping, and some of the most elegant villas are seen from great advantage from this elevated spot, and no one would doubt a greater treat than to spend a few hours in this delightful retreat during the summer season, more particularly on holidays, when the harbour is covered with vessels of all sizes. In front of all the rooms is a beautiful garden, 100 feet long, and 20 feet wide, on the same level, flagged with marble slabs, forming a fine promenade, in which shade and warmth may be had.

ON THE FIRST FLOOR are six fine bedrooms, larger than most, well ventilated, and cheerful, finished in character with the best of materials. A bathroom, with a hot and cold shower bath. A convenient bathroom with plunges and shower bath; plenty of hot and cold water. A bathroom with plunges and shower bath; plenty of hot and cold water. Gold Quartz.
Napoleon Reef, Bathurst.

HOAKER and CO. are favoured with instructions from the Executors of the late Captain Hoaker, to sell by auction, at the Royal Hotel, on TUESDAY, 23rd November next, the following property:

THE NAPOLÉON REEF and ENCLOSURE.

This claim is the first selection on the reef, known as the prospecting claim, being 129 yards on the course of the reef, by a transverse line of 100 yards; it is worked by the Napoléon Reef Company, and has been proved to have been effected by a small quantity of capital in a few years. The average yield of gold being 1 oz. 12 dwts. per ton; and every particle of quartz raised is productive. At an adjoining claim 40 feet below the deepest work, cut vast rich gold in this claim.

The large extent of ground, the steady yield, the average power of the lode, all point to this property as permanent and profitable. Out of past profits considerable sums have been secured to individual capitalists, and the company, independent of ample provision, expended of his own

The upland L. leucostictus in the phrase and direction of the operates L. leucostictus and BATTERY. of 16 h.p., "HORIZONTAL," and has a motor of 70 hp capacity. There are two batteries of 4-500 ampere each and can run in gear; tank of 400 gallons, supplied also in installation. The engine is mounted on a base of 100 yards of iron piping. There are also blankets, albedo and a good assortment of blacksmith's tools—the whole petroleum outfit, crumbing with ease 120 tons of raw quartz per week.

There are also, not in gear, 12 revolving stamps of 70
lb. each, and Chilian mill; these, in operation, would be able to quantify now crushed, making a total of 300 tons weekly.

The Engine House is a well-finished, substantial building with a roof of corrugated iron, and a floor of concrete, built upon an area of land, held under a miner's right from the Government.

The plant is the most perfect on this Western Gold-field,
and considering the small quantity of ground yet explored
the mine promises an abundant supply of quartz for many years. The fact that the mine is so far advanced is considered to be the usual case of answering.

Intending purchasers are invited to inspect the property at any time, and to obtain further particulars by applying to the undersigned.

Day of sale—
20th November, at 12 o'clock.
